U. S. DESTROYER STANDS BY TO GUARD AMERICANS

Japanese Army and Naval Units in Five-Hour Battle

PROTESTS REJECTED

British Cabinet Discusses The China Crisis and Speeds Alliance Negotiations

(By International News Service)

Developments today in the Far East situation:

Hongkong—Japanese army and naval units in a five-hour battle occupied the south China port of Swatow, aiming to cut off China's war supplies. The U. S. destroyer Pillsbury stood by to protect Americans.

Tientsin—Japanese rejected formal British protests against their Tientsin blockade. As a result of the occupation of Swatow, the Admiralty said Japan will redouble efforts to tighten the south China coast blockade.

Tientsin—Japanese officials refused even to discuss a relaxation of the foreign area blockade with British officials.

London—British cabinet discussed the China crisis, while new instructions were sent to Moscow to accelerate alliance negotiations.

HONGKONG, June 21—Crushing Chinese opposition in a five-hour battle, Japanese army and navy landing forces today occupied the south China port of Swatow, almost under the guns of the U. S. destroyer Pillsbury.

In a stunning surprise offensive designed to cut off Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's flow of war supplies, from 300 to 500 blue-jackets and soldiers, backed by warship guns, landed on either bank of the Swatow river at 4 a. m.

At 9 a. m. it was announced that "after considerable resistance," the Japanese "achieved their offensive" and another port was added to those in China controlled by Nippon.

Doylestown Adopts One-Way Traffic Law

DOYLESTOWN, June 21—This Borough's busiest thoroughfare, State street, a portion of well known Route 202, was yesterday made a one-way street at a session of Borough Council. The ordinance directing the change will become effective July 1 and continue until October 1 during a trial period.

Travel will go west on State street and east on Oakland avenue, one block south of State street. Two-hour parking on both sides will be allowed in all the business section, including the one-way State street and Oakland avenue.

Council also passed an ordinance authorizing that fines imposed in the Borough for disorderly conduct, be turned over to the Borough treasury instead of going to the county under the present set-up. An ordinance defining disorderly conduct in the borough was passed.

Another ordinance making it necessary to get a permit before driving advertising sound trucks with amplifiers in Doylestown, is being framed for passage at the next meeting.

"This is the biggest advancement in solving Doylestown's parking problems, that Council has ever made," declared Dr. John J. Burgess, chief Burgess, as he signed the one-way street ordinance today. "It will relieve congestion and will do a great deal to change the minds of the State as to their intention of by-passing Doylestown on main routes."

REV. DR. WM. B. PUGH TO SPEAK AT HARTSVILLE

Will Be Speaker Sunday Evening in Historic Neshaminy Warwick Church

CLERK OF ASSEMBLY

The Rev. Dr. William Barrow Pugh of Philadelphia, Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, has made a study of Church law and procedure since his youth. He is to preach Sunday at the Neshaminy Warwick Presbyterian Church, Hartsville. Even before entering college he was an occasional assistant to the Stated Clerk of that time, the late Rev. Dr. William Henry Roberts, who was Dr. Pugh's uncle. Almost without interruption since then, he has been an assistant during several months each year to the Stated Clerk. This service has included intimate contact with the problems of the church during the 17 years' administration of the Rev. Dr. Lewis Seymour Mudge, whom Dr. Pugh succeeded in August, 1938.

Dr. Pugh was born January 20, 1889, at Utica, New York, the son of William Barrow and May Jane (Albrow) Pugh, who were of Welsh ancestry. Though he found it necessary to work his way through the University of Pennsylvania, he received his bachelor's degree in 1910, after only three years of study. In 1912 he received his master's degree from Princeton University, in 1913 was graduated by Princeton Theological Seminary, and in 1915 was ordained to the ministry. During the next 23 years he was the pastor of two Presbyterian churches: Beacon Church of Philadelphia, 1915-28, and First Church of Chester, Pennsylvania, until 1938.

In the ecumenical field, Dr. Pugh since 1935 has been the American Secretary of the World Alliance of Presbyterian and Reformed Churches, with which he had been actively connected for many years previously. He was a delegated member of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America 1932, 1934 and 1936, and since 1932 has been a member of the Council's executive committee. He is secretary of the General Council of the Presbyterian Church, and he has been a member of several outstanding Special Committees of the General Assembly. He is also a trustee of Princeton Theological Seminary, and a contributor of articles on Church law and polity to magazines.

Dr. Pugh is a member of the American Legion, having served in France as Chaplain of the 19th Field Artillery, 28th Division (1918-19), and he is now the chaplain of the 11th Infantry, Pennsylvania National Guard.

In 1933 the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on him by the College of the Ozarks, and in 1939 that of Doctor of Laws by Tusculum College. In 1917 Dr. Pugh married Miss Emma Marie Schaperkotter of Berlin, N. J. They have two sons.

JAPANESE URGE HATRED OF BRITAIN

North China Conquered Provinces Are Forced to Stage Mass Meetings

PART OF PROPAGANDA

(This is one of a series of articles covering the high points of a five thousand mile tour of North China under Japanese military occupation between the Great Wall and the Yangtze Valley.—INS)

By John Goette

L. N. S. Staff Correspondent

KAIFENG, (Honan Province) China, June 21.—(INS)—Unveiled Japanese hatred of Britain and France which I found everywhere in occupied North China reached its apex in this provincial capital which has been under Japanese military occupation for one year.

Across the headquarters entrance of the puppet Governor Shou Jui-chen was a banner with great characters urging the populace to consider as enemies any nation assisting Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and the legitimate Chinese national government. This was part of an anti-British and French mass meeting forced upon Kaifeng's natives a few days earlier.

Governor Shou immediately launched upon a tirade against those two countries.

"Chiang Kai-shek with the help of Britain, France and Soviet Russia causes us great trouble," he began. "What is the ambition of those three nations? They wish to take our lives and money. We must drive out Chiang Kai-shek and with him our enemies, Britain, France and Russia. For our own protection, we must co-operate with Japan to establish a new order in East Asia."

Ironically, the Governor was reading from notes made on a Japanese typewriter. The Chinese always write such documents by hand. Likewise it was obvious that the remarks had been prepared for the Governor by his advisor, Colonel K. Usuda, Chief of the Special Mission of the Imperial Japanese Army.

Subsequently I talked with missionaries here. They said they were not worried by the Japanese campaign against westerners. Neither the Chinese populace nor the Japanese had made any moves against their work. On the streets I found the Chinese completely friendly and not the least interested whether I was an American or a British whom they are supposed to hate.

Is He Self-Hypnotized?

Washington, June 20. IT certainly would seem that those who have been indicating the appalling growth of the Federal bureaucracy and urging the necessity for economy owe support to any Administration of a fiscal who, as Attorney General al Murphy did the other day, enthusiastically lauds the civil service and urges a reduction of twenty-five per cent. in the job-holding forces. It would be pleasant anyhow to stop scoffing at Mr. Murphy, who, whatever else may be said about him, is an improvement over his immediate predecessor, and, using his recent speech as an excuse, join with his journal-

$150,000 Fire Loss

Philadelphia, June 21—Breaking through a fire wall, a stubborn four-alarm fire swept through the six-story main office warehouse of the Miller Storage Company, North Broad street, today, causing a loss estimated unofficially at more than $150,000.

The blaze poured out thick acrid smoke, and 50 firemen reported at ambulances and emergency first-aid stations for treatment of inflamed eyes and smoke sickness.

From fire towers and vantage points in the street, fire fighters from more than 25 engine companies poured 12,000 gallons of water a minute into the structure, but the flames raged out of control for five hours.

Ten thousand dollars worth of expensive furniture and rugs owned by wealthy residents now at their homes in the mountains and seashore resorts, were destroyed as flames raged through the structure.

Fire Marshal Jacob Clinton expressed the belief that the fire was due to spontaneous combustion of an oil mixture used to polish furniture. The blaze started on the third floor and mushroomed through the entire building which was packed with household articles from top to bottom.

Fifty pieces of apparatus responded to the alarm as the blaze of undetermined origin sent dense clouds of smoke towering over the North Broad street area, and forced residents to flee from nearby homes. Police and firemen threw cordons around other nearby buildings as flames threatened the two Gulf structures. Several hundred workers in one building were prevented from entering the place.

A call to the Water Department of officials for extra pumps on mains leading to the area was sent in after water pressure began to drop rapidly, and hampered work of fire fighting.

Position "Unclear"

London, June 21—The position of the Tokyo government regarding the main issues in the Anglo-Japanese conflict is still "unclear," Prime Minister Chamberlain declared today. The Prime Minister asserted it had not yet been decided whether the issues will be thrashed out at Tientsin or in Tokyo, but added that further word on developments was anticipated for later today or tomorrow.

Japanese Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita, Chamberlain said, has promised to institute an inquiry into alleged discrimination against any ill treatment of British residents of Tientsin.

TALL CEDARS TO PARADE HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Expect Over 200 Uniformed Men to Take Part in Procession

ESCORTED BY CADETS

Friday evening the people of Bristol will witness a demonstration that has never before been seen here. The celebration will be put on by an organization known as the Tall Cedars of Lebanon, with headquarters in Trenton, N. J. This organization is an auxiliary of the Masonic Fraternity and is often called "the playground of Free Masonry."

They will bring with them about 200 uniformed men consisting of a large band, a bugle corps, the rangers and the boosters' association. Several hundred more members will accompany the Forest. The parade will leave the high school building at 7:30 o'clock and follow the following route: Down Wilson avenue to Pond street to Jefferson avenue, to Radcliffe street, to Market street, to Pond street, to Mill street, to Radcliffe, to Monroe street, to the school building where a meeting will be held. At the conclusion of the parade the Rangers will give an exhibition drill in the school yard.

A large number of members of the Bristol Lodge of Masons are members of Trenton Forest, as well as a number from Newtown Lodge. These local members have engaged the American Legion Cadet Bugle Corps and will act as an escort to the visiting Forest. Members from Bristol and Newtown are requested to meet at the high school building at 7:15 o'clock and are reminded to wear their pyramids.

The parade will be headed by the Chief of the Bristol Police Department and by four members of the State Police. It will probably be one of the most colorful parades ever seen here. The officers of the Forest will be dressed in white. During the session to be held in the High School auditorium a class consisting of fifteen or twenty candidates will be initiated. Following the initiatory ceremonies a vaudeville show will be given. All local members of the Forest are urged to parade.

Not Particular About Attire

(By "The Stroller")

The other night when the burglar alarm sounded at the Farmers National Bank building, some of those affiliated with the bank responded in very quick time, but in doing so, neglected to dress in any particularly formal manner.

One was found wearing only a pair of trousers but was minus his shirt. Another was seen buttoning and fastening his garments as he ran panting through the street. A third had pulled his trousers over some undergarments, while a fourth was minus several pieces of wearing apparel.

A member of the clergy in the vicinity at the time recognized the sound of the alarm and he responded, but much against the importunities of his wife, who doesn't mind him battling against sin but just can't see the necessity for him to fight burglars when not in his own home. Her calls for him to retreat, however, went unheeded, I am told.

AT THE very moment Mr. Murphy was expressing himself in favor of

SKATING INTO SAFETY

The nationwide campaign for traffic safety has ramifications which reach far beyond the proper procedure for motorists. During the last few years there has been considerable and fruitful effort to educate pedestrians in the way they must walk so as to safeguard their own lives and the lives of automobile drivers. Rules have also been drawn up which call for compliance by bicycle riders. The newest development in this fight against sudden death on the streets is safety education for roller skaters.

New York City leads the way with the first roller skating rules contest, in which 20,000 pupils in the elementary schools participated. The line on the chart of traffic deaths in the large cities rises sharply every year as summer advances, due to the increased total mileage of traffic in pleasant weather. The roller skate accounts for many deaths every summer.

The winner of the New York roller skating rules contest is a 13-year-old girl who has been an ardent roller-skate fan since she was four years old. Her list of winning rules was developed out of her own experiences on the sidewalk, in the street and in the park.

Little Miss Adair Appleton's rules are simple and sensible: Skate in a safe place, make sure that skates are securely fastened, keep mind on skating and watch out for traffic, avoid stunting, obey all traffic rules and lights which apply to automobiles, pedestrians and bicycles, and remember that "hitching" takes many lives.

Roller skating is great fun and healthful exercise. The responsibility rests with parents to teach children how to enjoy their fun without serious mishap.

SHORTER DAYS!

June 21 is the longest day of the year, which means that from now until the end of 1939—or until December 21, to be exact—days, or the portion of them illuminated by daylight, will become progressively shorter. As few persons want to be reminded of this, there is no particular point in bringing it up, but attention is called to it in the interest of pure realism.

To be sure, summer also begins annually on June 21, according to the calendar, but actually summer has been here for some time, so it will be worse than futile to editorialize on the official advent of summer some weeks after its actual arrival upon the scene.

But when June 21 arrives, and the calendar chronicles that the day which falls upon this date has the most daylight of any of the entire year, and that thereafter days will begin to get shorter, imperceptibly at first, and then with accelerated tempo, the calendar, for once, is right on the dot. Oh, well; first thing it will be Labor Day, and from that point to Christmas will be but a hop by the calendar or otherwise.

A great advantage of the 30-hour week is that a fellow can knock off early, drive 75 miles and have time to fall in step in a picket line.

A critic says there are loopholes in the tax structure because those who draw laws are all thumbs. With none of them in the dike, making a reduction of twenty-five per cent. in the number and a great saving in cost, the Administration of which he is so conspicuous a part was pushing an additional appropriation of $250,000 a year to provide Mr. Harry Hopkins, his Cabinet colleague, with fifty new "Experts" for his department, the need for which Administration spokesmen were unable to explain. At the same time, too, the President himself is about to announce the names of six new $10,000 secretaries, which he insisted upon having under the Reorganization Act, but whose duties are still a matter of complete mystery.

WHILE it is true that in his own department Mr. Murphy has been busy throwing out pets of his predecessor, he has filled many of these places with pets of his own and his hunching, truculent assistant, Mr. Thurman Arnold, certainly has increased the anti-trust division both as to personnel and cost. In brief, Mr. Murphy has not put his words into effect in his own department. He talks but he does not act. On the contrary, he very quickly found a place in his department for Mr. Thomas Amle, the radical ex-Congressman whom Mr. Roosevelt named on the Interstate Commerce Commission, but whose name was withdrawn when it was made clear the Senate would not confirm.

AND what makes his whole pronouncement seem ridiculous is that at this very time he is at work trying to land a job for ex-Senator J. Thomas Hefflin, of Alabama. Now, there is no particular objection to Mr. Hefflin getting a job. He is an old man in hard luck and just as good as thousands who clutter up the New Deal pay roll. Nevertheless, it is somewhat startling to find on the same day that the New York Times printed the Murphy speech demanding the abolition of unnecessary jobholders, an account of Mr. Murphy's press conference, at which the Attorney General admitted an effort was being made to get a job for Mr. Hefflin, said he did not know whether it would be in his department or some other, but added that he took the responsibility.

THIS statement was printed not only on the same day Mr. Murphy's declaration against useless jobholders was made but actually on the same page. When Mr. Murphy's own effort to add to the payrolls is publicized on the same page as his speech urging their decrease, when such things as the indefensible National Emergency Council are recalled; when the realities of the pay roll and civil service situation are considered, it must be admitted that for Mr. Roosevelt's Attorney General to blather about economy, urge that pay rolls be reduced and dilate upon the beauties of the civil service is just about the limit. There seem but two explanations—either Mr. Murphy hypnotizes himself or he operates on the theory that the American people will swallow anything.

"AIR MAIL BRIDE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXXI

When did trouble first creep into the peace of their $40-a-month Eden? Looking back at it afterwards, Marie could never be sure, and as for Edward—Edward would never say.

It was so perfect at first. It was their honeymoon, really. The fact that they both left early and came back late didn't spoil it. It made their hours together more precious.

They had a house of their own. They walked up the steps, and opened the door with their own latch key. And there it was—their home. The little square hall, the larger square living-room, with its taupe Chesterfield, its taupe club-chair, its island of "semi-oriental" rug on its newly-finished hardwood floor.

Their very own bath, with its orchid tile and the orchid towels Marie bought to match. Their own mahogany bedroom, with its old-rose drapes and bedspread. Their green and white kitchen, for which they'd bought the singing tea-kettle together!

Everything was so new and shiny, it was really fun keeping it clean. Marie didn't mind a bit. She didn't mind cooking either. She loved it. But how in the world do people who work all day and have no apartment house manager to take the stuff in manage to do their ordering? Marie tried a half dozen ways, but none of them worked. And aside from the difficulty of being expected to have everything ready to eat at one and the same time—which seemed just about impossible—there was Edward's annoyance at having to wait for his dinner.

"I leave the office at quarter to 5, in order to catch the 5 o'clock boat—I CAN'T leave any earlier, when I don't get there until a little after 9, and have an hour for lunch!"

"I'm not complaining. I'm just remarking that it's tough to have to sit around and wait 2 hours for a meal."

"I hurry as fast as I can!"

"I know you do, honey. But you know we always ate at 6 at our house, and I get so blamed hungry."

She thought, yes, you ate at six all right. Your mother would serve dinner at six if half of you were dying of smallpox, and the other half would be right there to eat it! Besides, nobody eats at six. Really fashionable people eat at eight. Why do you have to act so abused if you have to wait until then?

She tried everything. She tried cooking the night before. Edward said that he wasn't particularly fussy, he wasn't like Pop, he would eat left-overs occasionally, when necessary. But wasn't it carrying it a little too far to be expected to live on them?

Miss Mead, the stenographer, who had an apartment out on Masonic avenue in San Francisco, with another girl, told Marie that they got nearly everything canned, and if one wanted home-cooked dishes, there was always a delicatessen.

Marie found one. It was quite a nice delicatessen, she thought. She also laid in a stock of canned goods. She tried all Miss Mead's tricks. She put a dash of brown sugar in the baked beans, and strips of bacon on top. She added minced onion to the spaghetti. She made a white sauce for the tuna and served it on toast.

Edward said he wasn't very hungry, and then went out in the kitchen after dinner and ate slice after slice of thickly buttered bread.

It was about that time that she suggested they might as well eat out. Nearly all the married girls she'd met said they always ate out. Several suggested tea-rooms where perfectly delicious meals could be had for from 35 to 50 cents.

Well, they made the rounds of them. Then for two nights they went to places of Edward's selection, and had grilled steaks and fried potatoes. "But it isn't a balanced meal," she pointed out anxiously, "and besides, it'll throw our budget all out! We can't possibly afford it."

"I tell you," he said, "we'll have our dinners with the folks. They'll be tickled to death to have us, and for the price you pay at one of your tea rooms, we'll get a meal that is a meal!"

Go back to his mother's? No girl would have done it.

After they had it all out, he didn't even expect it of her, so it couldn't have been the meals alone that made the trouble.

For some reason he was upset about the chest of silver that Flo and Walt Carson sent for a wedding present.

He said that it wasn't the kind of a present that you expect to get from an employer, especially when you've been married six months and never had a real wedding anyway.

"Nobody else sent us a wedding present!"

"Why, Edward! Charlie and Mother—"

"Oh, yes, I know. But Carson isn't your mother—"

"I've known him almost as long!"

"Him! I notice you forgot to mention Flo that time. Walt. Walt. Walt. That's all I get every night. Walt wants me to help him pick out a present for Junior. Walt! I hate the sound of his name!"

She looked at him, astonished.

It took a moment for the full import of what he meant, to sink in.

"You can't be—jealous—of Walt?"

She could hardly form the words. Her face was quite white. She felt as she might if he had accused her of bad taste in having lunch with Charlie, whom she thought of as her own father.

She said, still in the same small shocked voice, "Walt is MARRIED!"

"I know he's married. But how much does that mean to him? Oh, I'm not criticizing you, Marie. I know you don't mean any harm, but I'm not so sure about him. Why isn't he living with his wife? What's he doing up here, while she's down south? If he thinks so much of her, why doesn't he send for her?"

She sat down on one of the straight chairs. Her knees felt weak. "Edward, I don't understand you, I really don't. Flo and Walt have been married—well, I don't know—15 years—heavens, he's way up in the thirties! They have two children and that nice home in Beverly. Flo wouldn't leave it, and bring the children up here, even if it is vacation time, because Walt'll be going back any day—or anyway, very soon—"

"That's what I've been hearing ever since you got the job, but he's still here."

"No, he took three trips south!"

"Flew! To get back quicker!"

"Yes, to the business!"

She came and took his two hands in hers. "Edward, please don't say things like that. We've had so many real troubles that I hate to have us arguing about something silly like this. I'll even take the silver back to him if you want me to, though I know it will hurt his feelings terribly, and I'll feel like an idiot doing it."

He rumbled her curls and kissed her lips. "You make me feel bad. I ought to be darn glad that somebody sent us half a ton of sterling silver. Maybe we can give a banquet sometime, and use about half of it."

"We'll have the real estate men. We'll have a buffet supper. I know just what to have."

"We'll have Walt, too," he said, anxious to be as generous as she. "I know I ought to be ashamed of myself, and I am. But that darn Ada saw you going into Solari's with him Saturday noon and brought the news right home to Mom. And Mom telephoned me—for my own good—you know. I'm sorry."

"I'm sorry, too. Maybe it does look funny. I won't go any more. I'll tell Walt—"

"Listen," he said, "isn't everything all right? Didn't I tell you I was sorry? I acted like a jackass and I know it. Now we'll forget it." "Forget it," Edward had said. Forget that he'd been jealous of Walt.

Well, she tried to forget it.

But every time she picked up one of her beautiful wedding present teaspoons to stir her coffee in the morning, she thought of it. She had told Walt the pattern that she liked. She had started it.

Everyone who knew Walt knew that he never did things like other people. He'd always had lots of money to spend and he'd always delighted in spending it.

He must have spent a fortune on the dolls and doll houses that he bought her when she was a child. Even Julie, who liked things done on a large scale herself, always chuckled over his Christmas presents—his pint bottles of precious perfumes, his boxes of candy, big as suitcases.

He just couldn't help it. Where other people sent a dozen roses, he sent five dozen. Where someone else would have sent a half dozen sets of silver, or at most, eight, of everything, Walt sent 24, in a case big as Captain Kidd's treasure chest!

But it didn't mean anything, she told herself.

It didn't mean anything. . . But why did he stay on in San Francisco when telephone calls, wires, letters called him back to the factory without further delay?

Why did he take her everywhere with him? Why did he find one excuse or another to have lunch with her each day? "I want you to meet this guy Miller. Something might come of it for you, later. It won't do you any harm to make the rounds with me tomorrow. You might wear that big felt—number 603—and put yourself away in one of those models Hertz got for you."

And he'd say: "Now don't complain. I may be making you work in your noon hour, but I'll make it up to you later. Things will be slack when I go south and you can have Fridays and Saturdays off, to make up."

That was another thing—those dresses that she got through Hertz, the wholesaler. The things that Hertz sold to the local trade were in the moderate price class and not particularly exciting. But several times a year Hertz went to New York and came back with models that were very exciting, indeed.

At Walt's suggestion—or was it more than a suggestion?—he "knocked them down" to Marie for a fraction of their cost. In return, she did a little modeling for him, since his factory and salesroom was in the same building. It worked out very well.

Too well? She looked at herself in the full-length bathroom mirror before she started out for work. Her once neglected hair shining and perfectly curled again, her white skin flattered by the correct tone of ivory powder, a touch of green eye-shadow above her green-gold eyes, her full red lips reddened with lipstick that wasn't too light and wasn't too dark and exactly matched her almond-shaped nails.

Well, hardly too well. A girl can't look too well. And she hadn't been extravagant, really. Her clothes cost practically nothing. Walt bought all her lunches. It wasn't really wicked to splurge on sheer chiffon hose and shoes and bags and gloves. That and carfare was all she spent.

And look what Ed spent on smokes and the car and treating the boys and those two tailored suits!

CROP saving rains have fallen on the Northeastern seaboard, promising better berries and other truck crops. The West coast is shipping sweet cherries, plums, melons, apricots, figs, seedless grapes and early pears. Sour cherries and gooseberries are available. Georgia freestone peaches are now in market. These are easy to peel and slice or to eat out of hand.

All meats including spring lamb are now reasonable. Poultry prices continue low. Eggs and butter are slightly higher but both are still excellent values.

New potatoes are plentiful and reasonable. Green beans, spinach and salad greens are inexpensive and abundant.

YOUR KNIFE NEEDS

By Katharine Fisher

Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

Since cutlery plays such an important part in the kitchen work, it will pay you to take time to consider just what you do need in the way of knives for your kitchen. Starting off with the most frequent tasks, we come first to the paring knives. It's best to have two, one at the sink, and one at the work table. Then there's always one where you need it, or for any helper you may have. A utility knife, slightly larger and stronger than the paring knives, has many uses. And there's no substitute for a grapefruit knife to loosen the sections of grapefruit and oranges.

KATHARINE FISHER
Director of
Good Housekeeping
Institute

There are paring knives with different-shaped blades to choose from. Pick up each one and do a little imaginary peeling and paring to get the feel of the knife and the comfort of the handle. There will be one that seems easiest to use and best fits your hand.

You need a good carving knife, that substantial, sturdy tool with its stiff blade and curved point that takes care of both raw and hot meats and gets in and under the joints of a fowl. And you just can't get along without a good slicer, which is a bit longer and narrower than the carver, with a slightly flexible blade. Thin, even slices of cold meat, fruit cakes, and pound cakes fall away neatly from its efficient blade.

A good bread knife won't lie idle even though you may buy some breads sliced. And of course there is bread to be cut every day for sandwiches and Melba toast, and you will have to slice your homemade breads yourself. Any bread knife approved by the Institute will cut clean.

We, at the Institute, feel that spatulas are indispensable. These flexible tools have so many uses. Each of our kitchens has three sizes. The small narrow one slips even the tiniest cupcakes out of the pans and spreads the icing on them; and looses, without breaking, the edges of jellies, or individual custards or puddings in turning them out. The medium-sized spatula, a little longer than a dinner knife, is used to remove larger cakes, meat loaves, etc., from their pans, and for such purposes as scraping up doughs that stick to the board or table. The shorter spatula, that is as broad as a pancake turner, is used for just that—turning pancakes, eggs, meat cakes, bananas and foods that are cooking in a skillet or on a griddle. Just the tool for lifting rolled cookies from board to baking sheet, and for removing them from the sheet when baked.

Include in your cutlery a two-tined fork large enough to give you a good grip in lifting a roast out of the pan and to hold firmly foods you are slicing. For carving, however—which is cutting toward you—always use a real carving fork with a protecting finger guard. For testing the doneness of vegetables and other foods that are cooking, add a smaller kitchen fork.

And don't overlook our good friend, the kitchen shears, which snip off carrot, beet and celery tops, clip the cord used in trussing poultry, trim the pastry of pies. Good kitchen shears are even strong enough to cut off the wing tips of poultry. The tool of a hundred uses, we say.

Japanese Urge Hatred of Britain

Behind the Japanese agitation which I found everywhere in highest circles, is anger over Britain's backing of Chinese national currency. When I call attention to the fact that America had opened credits for Chiang Kai-shek, the Japanese smile it off. American friendship is so badly desired and needed by Japan that they are willing to forget our assistance to Chiang while blaming Britain and France for that very thing.

Likewise Japanese officers harp on the idea that Britain was jealous of Japanese industrial success in China and were deliberately trying to destroy it.

At Shanghai the Japanese army spokesman, Major Nishihara, assured me: "Japan will never stand for British domination in East Asia." Other Japanese expressed the hope that their army would take the bold step of seizing the International Concession.

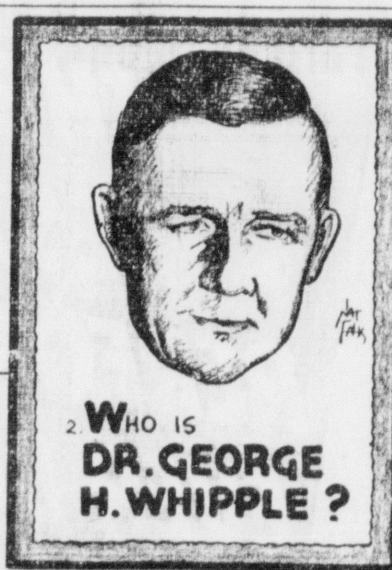

In Tientsin where I was shown Japanese cotton mills still in ruins after sixteen months, Lt. Colonel Omoto, Chief of the Special Mission of the Imperial Japanese Army, referred to the "Japanese mills and factories, the fruit

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Sleeves change in fashion so unobtrusively that only people professionally interested in style pretend to keep up with them. Also something that never forcibly meets the eye is that there is a special sleeve pattern this summer for every one of the numerous silhouettes in vogue.

The short, puffed sleeve with slightly extended shoulderline is the most commonly used. In "Nancy Drew and the Hidden Staircase," Bonita Granville wears this to the exclusion the new May Christie serial story

ANTOINETTE didn't want to think of tomorrow! Jilted, penniless, she faced a future that seemed hopeless.

Then she suddenly became the Marquise—the toast of New York's night life. Her Park Avenue apartment was the envy of the metropolis, her clothes and parties the talk of society. But, without warning, out of her past came Brock.

The glamor of New York after dark, the scheming of Park Avenue society, the story of a girl who wouldn't be defeated... told in

TIGER REED TO BE IN FEATURE BOUT AT ST. ANN'S ARENA

Mike De Stefano, Phila., To Battle New York Boxer In Wind-Up Match

LEIGHTON ON THE CARD

Numerous Other Good Men Fill In A Lively Supporting Card

York and Philadelphia will be represented at the inaugural of professional boxing in St. Ann's outdoor arena, Wood and Franklin streets. The first bout is scheduled for 8.45 o'clock, and in the event of rain, the show will be held tomorrow night.

The wind-up which is scheduled for eight rounds is between Mike DeStefano, Philadelphia, and the colored Tiger Reed, New York. Reed recently beat Mickey Maher and holds a triumph over Paulie Walker, Trenton. However, DeStefano has the youth part in his favor and will give the colored boy quite a tussle. The boys are light-heavyweights.

Bristol will be represented by the youth who thrilled the fans by his performances when in the amateurs. He is none other than William "Hokey" Leighton. When in the amateur ranks Hokey fought under the colors of the Bucks County Rescue Squad, and many times when it appeared as if he was going down to defeat, would stage one of his belated rallies and snatch victory from defeat.

Hokey's foe in the first six-rounder scheduled will be "Babe" Kelly, Roebing. Kelly comes from a fighting family and is a brother of "Pete" Kelly, who is making a hit in professional fighting in Philadelphia. He is in excellent trim for the bout and expects to chalk up a win over the local boy.

Winner of 25 out of his last 26 bouts, John "Henry" Johnson, Philadelphia, is meeting a tough opponent in Mickey Finn, New York. Finn packs dynamite in his wallop and expects to put Johnson away in the early rounds. But the colored Philadelphia boy has the stamina and intends to add Finn to his list of victims.

At one time, Freddie Nebo, Philadelphia, was considered the best amateur prospect in the eastern district of the A. A. U. Suddenly, he decided to turn pro and has been going great since. Tonight he meets Sammy Santori, Trenton, who fought in the amateurs with the St. Ann's A. A. boxing team. The local fight patrons know the hitting ability of Santori and have done much reading about Nebo. This bout should be a "natural" and is expected to hold the fans on the edge of their seats throughout the four rounds.

Freddie Budassi, Trenton, who while fighting for St. Ann's, last Summer, enjoyed a streak of eight straight triumphs before he ran into disaster, will have a stiff boy to fight in Joe Colucci, Philadelphia, who has been in the pro ranks for more than four seasons.

In the opening number, Joey Tillie, Trenton, is fighting a boy from his home town, in tackling Sammy Azzinaro, Trenton. This is anticipated to be a fast-swinging match from start to finish, with Tillie being a slight favorite.

The local arena is expected to be jammed to capacity for the opening card. The advance ticket sale has been greater than anticipated and with the card booked, Match-Maker and Promoter Joe Gruerio feels confident that professional boxing in Bristol will be a success.

A long home run in the eighth inning by Joe Cialella broke up a tight ball game at Abington, when the Profs stars, resplended in their new blue and white uniforms, subdued the doctors by the tune of 10-8. Timely hitting by Mignoni, L. Cialella, and the effective pitching of Profs enabled the blue and white to overcome their strong opponents.

ARDMORE NINE TO PLAY LANDRETH TEAM HERE

Ardmore, one of the finest teams in the Main Line Baseball League, will be the attraction at Landreth Ball Park tomorrow evening, at 6.15.

The Main Line League has been in existence for almost 40 years and during much of that time Ardmore has been one of the leading clubs in the circuit. The team was organized right after 1900 by Fletcher Stokes, the old captain and third baseman of the University of Pennsylvania, and with the exception of one or two years has been in the organization.

Manager Smith of Ardmore was not sure last night who his battery would be but he has several good pitchers. Monday night Ardmore beat Kensington of the Philadelphia City League in an 11-inning game, 1-0. Kensington beat Landreth, 3-2, so in the game tomorrow the "farmers" will probably have their hands full. Howard Black will throw them up with Jack Brodick behind the bat.

Landreth will also be gone on Sunday when they will play the Roebing Club of the Burlington County League at three o'clock.

ST. LUKE'S TAKES Y. M. A. IN WELL PLAYED GAME

St. Luke's took Y. M. A. over for the second time in a well played game at Croydon Tuesday night. A. at bat with 2 hits while Langan carried off the honors for St. Luke's with three hits and driving in two of the four runs.

"THE BEST PERFORMER EVER BUILT!"
Owners say it—Sales prove it

Count acceleration and hill-climbing... count riding comfort and reliability... count economy of gas, oil, tires and upkeep... Owners say it—sales prove it—"Chevrolet is the best performer ever built!"

They say Chevrolet is "the best performer ever built" because it out-accelerates, out-climbs, out-performs all other economy cars—bar none! Because it represents the highest standard of smooth, safe, steady riding and day-in-and-day-out dependability. Because it gives all these results at lower cost.

But riding beats reading! So drive this fleet, powerful Chevrolet and prove to yourself what Chevrolet sales prove to the world, that owners are right when they say it's "the best performer ever built."
